Founded in 2002, Groundwork's mission is to support young people living in high poverty urban communities as they develop their strengths, skills, talents and competencies through effective experiential learning and work programs. Our ultimate goal is that the young people who grow up in the neighborhoods we serve have the same chance of a good life as young people who did not grow up in an under-resourced community. For us, a good life means that, as an adult, you can answer "yes" to the following questions

- Are you happy?
- Do you feel financially and physically secure?
- Have you been able to make real choices about the course of your life?

Groundwork is based in East New York, a physically isolated community in Eastern Brooklyn where over 70 percent of children are born into poverty.
